

Claims

What I claim as my invention is:

1. The process of allowing a Web user to enter a URL into an internet-connected system which immediately after retrieves and saves the Web page (or other type of Web contents) found at this URL together with the URL and the current time and date, so that the Web page (or other type of Web contents) can be recalled later in its exact form and displayed together with its original URL and the time and date for its retrieval.